

How to protect your business from phishing and ransomware attacks.

Automated security software and hardware protect your data—partially. Many companies install such safeguards and think that they have successfully addressed the threat of security breaches. However, even the best automated solutions do not confront an even bigger vulnerability—your own employees.

Cybercriminals are getting better at exploiting the fallibility of well-intentioned employees. They devise cunning, covert methods to trick workers into giving away vital business data. They might, for example, initiate a seemingly valid financial transaction that allows malware to infect their computers (and the company network). It's a real problem, as evidenced by headlines that appear almost daily.

Training your staff to recognize these attempts can put a serious crimp in the criminals' plans. When you educate your employees about sophisticated phishing and ransomware attacks, you are performing the most effective countermeasures available to you. A staff that knows what to look for is your best ally in defeating the legions of wrongdoers who seek to do your company harm.

PHISHING

Your employee is presented with a page that looks like it comes from a reputable source. What seems like a harmless click on a trusted site can open the floodgates to malware that can devastate your precious data.

RANSOMWARE

Sophisticated thieves gain control of your irreplaceable data and threaten to destroy it unless they are handsomely paid. Victims can lose money, data or both.

Attacks hit even the biggest companies.

95

Percentage of U.S. companies that report phishing attacks.

84

Percentage who reported that the attacks were successful.

78

Percentage of companies that performed phishing tests that succeeded in capturing sensitive information from a quarter of their employees or more

1.6

Millions of dollars, on average, that a single attack costs a company

A solution to an all too human problem

We can help your employees become your greatest security asset. Even your best workers can be a serious weakness to your company if they aren't knowledgeable and vigilant. Only by educating them and implementing company-wide security processes can you be assured that you have done everything possible to protect your data.

Dynamic Quest Security Awareness Services combines training and systematic follow-up to shore up your data defenses. Ours is a service that has proven itself in the real world, in countless companies that sought the strongest possible protection from the growing threat.

It's effective because it addresses the human side of the equation. We have examined the behavior that unintentionally exposes your company to risk. Our training not only presents the necessary information but engages the active, ongoing participation of the people who come to work each day.

Dynamic Quest Security Awareness Services include:

Security awareness training

Interesting, interactive learning modules help your employees recognize threats:

- How to avoid fraudulent file attachments – the #1 method of attack.
- How to spot spam emails containing notices about bills, invoices or price lists.
- How to recognize phishing pages that are almost indistinguishable from legitimate ones.
- What to do when in doubt.

Security awareness reporting

Receive scheduled reports that track suspicious activity and identify employees that have fallen victim to phishing simulations.

Prevention and peace of mind

Security awareness services are proven to reduce vulnerability up to 90%. Are you certain that your employees could recognize a malicious attachment? Remember, the attacks are constant and an employee only has to make a mistake once to cause serious problems.

Simulated phishing attacks

We perform random fake attacks to test your staff's awareness and vulnerability. These simulated attacks expose weaknesses and allow you to take remedial action to prevent the real thing.

Our programs engage your staff

There's no reason that being aware and on guard has to be a boring chore. We'll be happy to show you how our accessible, interesting videos and training materials will be understood and appreciated across your organization.

Call us today to find out more.

Greensboro: 336.369.0455 Raleigh: 919.297.1751 Winston-Salem: 336.369.0429 Charlotte: 704.697.5585

